GLIMPSES OF CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

Shanghai is the most northerly of the five treaty ports on the south-east coast of China, and is situated at the junction of the rivers Hwang-po and Woosung, which flow into the Yangtze, in the province of Kiang-su.

The site upon which the present city now stands was occupied by a native town bearing the same name of Shanghai—which means "near the sea"—as early as the year 249 B.C., and Chinese records show that, from even as far back as the 11th century, it was of no little commercial importance, attaining in fact to the rank of a city as early as the 11th century.

The port was opened to foreign trade in the year 1843, after some fighting between the British and Chinese forces which took place the previous year. Two years later foreigners commenced to settle in the place and several houses and other buildings were erected by them, other European nations, of which the French were the most prominent, not being slow to follow our lead and to obtain concessions in the vicinity of the native town.

Shanghai is situated in a large and well watered plain shut in by low hills on the westward side only. This plain is for the most part under cultivation, rice, cotton, and grain being grown in large quantities, for the soil is extremely rich. Cotton is, however, the principal crop, and the importance of the city may be said to depend to a large extent on its being situated at the outlet of the cotton-growing districts, for with the exception of silk and tea, cotton forms the staple article of export of the place.

This Kiang-su plain is exceptionally favoured in the way of communications by water, for rivers and creeks intersect it in every direction, and by means of these the crops of cotton, grain, and vegetables, which are raised in abundance all over its area are carried with great facility to the city, whence they are exported on seagoing vessels to all parts of the world.

The variety of vegetables raised is very great, the Chinese excelling in this branch of cultivation; but besides vegetables, fruit, such as peaches, plums, strawberries, medlars, cherries, &c., are largely and successfully grown in the surrounding districts, while from further north, apples, pears, grapes, walnuts, and chestnuts, are brought down in large quantities. Flowers, too, both European and indigenous, are cultivated by the Chinese, and flourish in the public and private gardens of the various settlements.

The approaches to Shanghai from the sea are via the estuary of the Yangtze and up the Soochow creek. This creek admits with difficulty only of the passage of large steamers and many schemes have been formulated for widening and deepening it, but without great success. The Chinese Government are, under treaty, supposed to maintain the open passage of the river, but they with oriental indifference, interest themselves but slightly in the matter; but the approaches from the sea are now well lighted and buoyed under European superintendence, lightships having been erected at various points near the mouth of the estuary, and two lightships maintained in the main river below Woosung.

After the first occupation by the British, the trade of Shanghai increased slowly until the opening to the Yangtze and the northern ports in 1861, when commerce received a great stimulus. This was enhanced by the opening up of Japan and by the adoption in that country of European methods and customs to such a large extent.

The value of land in the neighbourhood of the city rose considerably in consequence of the expansion of trade, so that land in the various foreign concessions is at the present day worth from 15 to 20 times as much as at the time of the first occupation. These concessions have also been greatly enlarged although not without considerable difficulty; for the Supreme Government at Peking has demurred to every request made by the European and American communities at Shanghai, for an extension of the area originally granted to them. These extensions have, however, in most cases been in the end tardily conceded, so that the total of the areas of foreign concessions in, or in the neighbourhood of the city, amount at the present day to some 6,000 acres. All ground belongs nominally to the Emperor of China and an annual rent is paid to him for it by the foreign residents.

Up to the year 1866 occasional risings and disturbances affected the progress of the port, and more than once these risings had to be repressed by force of arms. Of these the most important was the Taiping rebellion which was not finally overcome until the year 1863, but from then until the present time no serious outbreaks have occurred. A British garrison was, however, maintained in Shanghai up to the year 1866. Each foreign community is represented by its own consul, and civil and criminal cases are tried in the consular courts. In other respects, as regards local affairs the residents govern themselves by means of the Municipal Council, which now consists of nine members of various nationalities, and this council is officially recognised by the Supreme Government and the diplomatic bodies at Peking.

The streets of the European portions of the city are arranged for the most part at right angles and in a series of squares, on the American plan, and these streets which were originally narrow and inconvenient, as those of all Chinese towns are, have of late years been considerably widened, and the healthiness of the city considerably improved thereby. The roads and streets are well paved and well lighted, and in addition to those of the city proper, there are several good roads running out into the country, trees have been planted on either side of these roads so that they form pleasant routes for riding, driving, and walking. The largest and most commodious residences of the more wealthy inhabitants, both native and foreign, are now situated outside the city and away from the busier part of the town. The Bubbling Well Road is one of the most favourite situations, and after that the Sicawei and Sinza roads, along each of which are many of the finest mansions, enclosed in their own grounds. There are, moreover, several extensive avenues of handsonetrees in the outskirts of the city, while within it are two or three small but well laid out public parks and gardens, notably those in the British and American concessions.

The city is lit throughout by electric light, for the supply of which there are no less than four Electric Light Companies established and doing a good business, one of these, it may be remarked, being the Chinese Electric Light Company.

The supply of water was at first a considerable difficulty owing to the low and swampy nature of the ground, and the absence of hills in the proximity of the city. A system of filtration has now, however, been introduced, by which the water obtainable locally is rendered potable, and a ample supply is now available.

Shanghai boasts no less than three first class hotels as well as numerous second class ones. The larger ones are to a great extent run on American lines, and are replete with elevators and every modern convenience. In the way of vehicular traffic, rickshaws are the most numerous form of conveyance, but there are, too, large quantities of public and private conveyances, pony carriages, and carts, besides passenger and cargo wheelbarrows used by the Chinese.

Five daily papers are published, of which four are English and one French. There are in addition to these, four weekly publications. There are also four native daily papers, in spite of the apparent excessive supply of news organs, all, both European and native journals, are said to be well supported and to have a good circulation.

There are many fine buildings throughout the city. Of these Trinity Cathedral, designed by Sir Gilbert Scott, is a fine example of architectural skill. It is constructed of red brick with stone dressings, its length being 152 feet, by 58 feet broad and 54 feet high. There is also a Roman Catholic Cathedral in the French concession, as well as several other churches and chapels of the various denominations. The Shanghai Club is one of the largest and most commodious institutions of the kind in the East. The building itself is a handsome and well designed one, and it is favourably situated at one end of the English bund. It cost £120,000, or more than £100,000 sterling, and is said to have ruined three contractors in the course of building.

Other buildings of note are the British Consulate and Court House, situated at the other end of the bund; the Masonic Hall, a fine edifice recently rebuilt; the premises of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, as well as those of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China, which are both of them handsome edifices.

There are two theatres, the Lyceum, a fair sized building capable of seating 700 persons, and the theatre attached to the German Club.

One of the most striking edifices in the city is the Custom House, the buildings of which have a frontage on the bund of 135 feet, and on the Hankow Road of 155 feet. These were designed by Mr. John Chambers. In the centre rises a clock tower, with a four-faced clock, the height of this tower being 110 feet and consequently a conspicuous object from almost every part of the city. There are in addition to the above several other fine buildings in the English and other foreign concessions. Of these the more noteworthy are the Central Police Station, the Town Hall and Public Market, large and airy, and lit throughout by electric light, and finally, in the French concession, the Municipal Hall and the Consulate.—Rangoon Times.

IT IS DIFFERENT NOW.

Once upon a time students of medicine held the notion that there were as many different diseases as the body has organs and parts; every one of these ailments requiring a different treatment. So stupid a mistake could lead only to miserable failures. For the fact is, the body is a single machine; and what concerns one part of it concerns, more or less closely, all the rest. Thus we see how it happens that one remedy, or mode of treatment, may relieve and cure a variety of complaints,—or what may appear like a variety, but are really various forms or out-comings of the same cause. Take, for example, Anemia, Scrofula, Poverty of Blood, General Debility, Influenza, Throat and Lung Diseases, etc.—a formidable array indeed they look to be; yet

WAMPOL'S PREPARATION quickly abates the worst of such cases, and absolutely cures many which have been abandoned as hopeless. The reasons are: its power over the digestive and assimilating process, its action in expelling impurities from the blood, and its consequent ability to vitalize and rebuild the whole structure. It is palatable as honey and contains the nutritive and curative properties of Pure Cod Liver Oil, combined with the Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites and the Extracts of Malt and Wild Cherry. It was not dreamed out, or discovered by accident; it was studied out, on the solid principles of applied medical science. It is precisely what it is said to be, and has won the confidence of the public on that basis. You may resort to it with a faith and hope that arise from the history of what it has done for others. Dr. Thos. Hunt Stucky says: "The continued use of it in my practice, convinces me that it is the most palatable, least nauseating, and best preparation now on the market. Every dose effective. 'You cannot be disappointed in it.' Sold by chemists here and throughout the world and A. S. Watson & Co., Limited.

HONGKONG, TUESDAY, JULY 21, 1903.

THE DEATH OF H. H. POPE

LEO XIII.

By permission of the Committee of the Hongkong General Chamber of Commerce we are authorized to publish the news, received in the Colony to-day, through Reuter's agency, of the death of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII. The event has long been expected. A representative of the Hongkong Telegraph called on the Right Rev. Bishop L. Piazzoli, at Glenaele, this afternoon to ascertain if any telegraphic despatch had been received by the Roman Catholic Mission in Hongkong from the Vatican to-day. His Lordship was good enough to inform our representative that he had received no official information, but was in possession of the sad report of the demise of the Roman Catholic Pontiff from a private source. Mr. Piazzoli further kindly stated, in reply to inquiry, that suitable arrangements will be made for a commemorative service which will not, however, be held before seven days have elapsed from the date of the demise of His Holiness. The death-bell at the R. C. Cathedral tolled at regular intervals of an hour to-day as soon as the regrettable news was received at the Mission House.

H. E. THE GOVERNOR AND THE CHINESE COMMUNITY.

But for the attitude of one section of the local Press there would be much analogy between the action of the Chinese community of Hongkong and the natives of India in endeavouring to secure the prolongation of the terms of office of the present administrators of this British colony and the Indian Empire. The Indian Press and the people heartily rejoice over the announcement made on good authority that Lord Curzon's term of office is to be extended by two years. It has been said that in fairness to the Viceroy and to the people, Lord Curzon deserves the extension. Unlike his predecessors, the present Viceroy has been peculiarly lucky. The country has been enjoying peace all round and its alleged prosperity has enabled him to grant a remission of taxation, however small it may be. Could the Chinese community of Hongkong have made out a similar case for Sir Henry Blake's administration of the local government, they would have met the unanimous support of the European community, from whom they appear to have been estranged by the manner they elected to proceed in regard to their petition and on account of which opposition was aroused, though not actively, against the wisdom of the Chinese action. The official communication published in our columns yesterday conveying the Secretary of State's reply to the Chinese petition, does not summarily dispose of the prayer of the memorial. Indeed, the construction that might be put to the official despatch is one that might justify reasonable expectation in the minds of the Chinese citizens that some degree of hope might be entertained that the prolongation of His Excellency's term of office might be acquiesced in by His Majesty in his desire to meet the appreciation, by the Chinese, of Sir Henry's government of Hongkong. For the Chinese it is indisputable that His Excellency has been all that might have been desired by them in the person of the representative of the King in this British colony. He has studied their wishes with every desire to meet them in all their reasonable aspirations. He has entered with sympathy in the spirit of their social customs and prejudices. And, accordingly, in the measures which science and hygiene dictate in combatting the greatest scourge that hamper a still greater development of the Colony, he has done all that in his power lay to assuage the sufferings and allay the apprehensions of the lower class of the Chinese among whom repressive measures were called for in the insatiable state of the city. He has yielded to native popular representation in keeping the theatres open during the prevalence of the recent epidemic; and in doing so he acted contrary to the recommendation of a majority of members of the Sanitary Board, by whom it was considered that the keeping open of the Chinese theatres was fraught with danger to public health by the easier dissemination of plague. Sir Henry's latest Governmental act, in so far as the Chinese are concerned, is the concession which he is granting them in the gradual enforcement of the new law in relation to cubicles and overcrowding of Chinese tenements. In this as in most matters wherein hardship might be inflicted to the lower orders of Chinese society, Sir Henry has shown consideration for and sympathy with Chinese feeling for which they have good cause to be thankful. But when we come to the matter of taxation, although there has not been an increase in rates, the recent increases in a number of licence fees, for detailing in articles of daily consumption have directly helped to make living, already expensive in Hongkong, still more so especially to those whose wages are entirely out of all proportion to the exorbitant demands for higher rents and higher cost of food. In looking about for sources wherefrom the revenue might be increased in order to meet the heavy charge entailed by the maintenance of the Sanitary Department principally, His Excellency's government has hit upon items which have not tended to relieve the burden arising out of the all-round difficulties to make ends meet by wage-earners in Hongkong. Taking the Chinese representation as it appears before us, it seems that there is no disinclination not to consider it. Circumstances, moreover, indicate that the growing popularity of Sir Henry Blake with the Chinese community is drawing the tie closer between the East and the West, especially as exemplified in Hongkong. The presumption is, therefore, a strong one that, notwithstanding any hue and cry that may be raised, His Excellency may yet retain the reins of government longer than a single term. In that event as it has been said of Lord Curzon by an Indian contemporary, we trust it may also be said of Sir Henry that, if his re-appointment to a new term of office is decided upon, he will try strenuously and earnestly to fulfil the expectations he has raised in the minds of the people and prove to them that he can not only talk in language, at once eloquent and captivating, but can also confer on the people substantial benefits and thus earn for himself the name of a successful administrator who contributed not a little to the improvement of the present condition of Hongkong and its inhabitants.

THE CHARGE AGAINST McEWEN.

The most interesting case on the calendar of the July Criminal Sessions was commenced at the Supreme Court this morning when the Chief Justice, Sir W. M. Goodman, and a special jury heard the charges against Robert Gardner McEwen, Inspector of Markets, for "that he did on the 15th day of July, 1902, at Victoria, in this Colony, then being a public servant, to wit, Inspector of Markets, unlawfully accept from one Fung Yung the sum of $10 with a view to influence his conduct as Inspector of Markets as aforesaid with regard to the performance of his duty in the enforcement of the ordinances, bye-laws, and regulations relating to markets and foods in this Colony." He was further charged with accepting on the 14th September last the sum of $17 from Leung Siu, on 24th December last $120 from Chan Wong, and $30 from Lai Kan, and on the 25th December last $100 from Ip Chung, Wu Kam and Lam King Shang.

The Attorney General (Hon. Sir H. Spencer Berkeley), instructed by Mr. F. B. L. Bowley, appeared on behalf of the Crown, and Mr. M. W. Slade, barrister-at-law, instructed by Mr. E. J. Grist (of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist), defended prisoner, who pleaded not guilty. The following special jury was sworn:—Messrs. H. Pinckney, A. O'D. Gourdin, A. J. Raymond, W. H. Poits, D. W. Craddock, F. H. Arjane and E. W. Rutter.

In opening the case, the Attorney General said that the defendant, who was an inspector of markets, was charged on the indictment they had heard read with having, on the several days mentioned, received from the persons referred to certain sums stated to be paid by them to him as bribes to influence his conduct as such inspector of market to induce him to abstain from doing his duty as such inspector. There was no question of law involved in the case; the question was really one of fact. The Crown would place before the jury certain evidence which, if they believed it, could leave no doubt in their mind that as a fact Inspector McEwen received from certain stall holders and others in the Markets presents in the shape of money and goods, and they could only come to the conclusion that they were given to him and accepted by him for the proper and illegal purpose charged in the indictment. The case was one of great gravity and seriousness both from a public point of view and from the point of view of the Inspector himself. Therefore, he was sure the jury would, without any request on his part, bring to bear on the facts presented to them their most careful consideration. Counsel said he did not desire to, in any way, prejudice their minds against the defendant in the words he was going to use, but he felt it his duty to relate to them the fact that it was absolutely necessary in the public interests that officers of the public service should be pure, and that they should discharge their duties without fear, favour or affection. If, therefore, they came to the conclusion that as a fact presents were given to the Inspector with the object of influencing him improperly, however much they might feel their verdict would be a most serious thing for the defendant, it would be their duty, as a guardian of public morality and public interests generally, to find a verdict against him. On the other hand, before they took the serious step of finding a man in defendant's position guilty of the very serious offence of bribery they would be convinced in their own minds that he did not accept the bribes as charged. Counsel proceeded to point out that, before entering the service, the prisoner was a police officer and was subsequently employed as Inspector of Markets. Everybody, of course, who accepted an office under the public trust, he said, must be taken to be aware of the impropriety of receiving bribes, and still more so must a man who had previously been in the police. If the jury, therefore, came to the conclusion that as a fact presents were received they could not hesitate to say that defendant was aware of the impropriety of accepting them. Previous history, previous training and previous experience would all have taught him that as Inspector of Markets he should not accept any presents from any persons against whom he would have to enforce the laws and regulations of Hongkong. Proceeding, Sir Henry said it would appear that the markets were under double control. The Registrar General had the letting of stalls and the Sanitary Board was responsible for the healthiness of the food and the cleanliness of the markets. Inspectors were appointed for the purpose of seeing that the food sold was fit for consumption and that the stalls were kept in a state of cleanliness. If the food of the markets was not properly kept either while alive or dead, or if the markets were not kept clean, it was for the inspectors to lay information before the Magistrates and prosecute under the regulation. The business of the markets was carried on by various guilds and each of the shops in those markets was appointed to keep the guild's accounts for certain periods. Counsel then proceeded to deal at length with the various charges against the defendant and considerable discussion ensued regarding the admissibility of guild account books as evidence.

The evidence was then proceeded with. Adam Gibson, Colonial Veterinary Surgeon, was the first witness called. He gave testimony similar to that related by him at the Magistracy which was fully reported in our columns at the time. Mr. Slade cross-examined him at length, and from the replies witness gave to his questions it appeared that defendant always paid great attention to the markets, which, since he took over the Chief Inspectorship, showed great improvement.

Regarding the furnishing of a certain report, Mr. Slade called for its production, observing that he had been "working against the whole forces of officialdom" and was unable to get that report.

Mr. Slade then resumed his seat. His Lordship—I will now ask the witness a question. As regards these complaints, are you aware or not whether they formed the subject of the present charge? Witness—I understood they did not. Mr. Slade—As I have stated, my Lord, they were matters having no bearing on the case at all. Fung Yung, salesman in the Sun Fu poultry shop, Western Market, again described a visit he made on 14th July, 1902 to the defendant's house in Chater Street and spoke to the payment of $10 of the poultry guild's money to the defendant.

Other witnesses were examined at length, and shortly after four o'clock the Court rose, until 10.30 a.m. to-morrow. His Lordship, observing to the jurors that he trusted to their honour not to discuss the case with anyone in the meantime.

His Lordship requested the Press to intimate to the members of the common jury, summoned for to-morrow, that their attendance would not be required until 10 a.m. on Thursday.

The Attorney General denied the existence of any such report as desired by Mr. Slade, who thereupon replied that, although it might be technically correct there was no such report, there were certain statements which the Crown had, and absolutely refused to produce.

Sir Henry Berkeley sprang to his feet, and denied the imputation, whereupon an interesting "passage at arms" ensued, which ended in Mr. Slade dropping the subject and proceeding with the cross-examination of the witness. He questioned him upon the cleaning of crates, disinfection in connection with the recent outbreak of plague at the Market, and upon which the defendant was energetically engaged. As a result of the charges made against the Inspector, immediately following the work, he was suspended from his duties.

Mr. Slade (producing a book)—Is this an occurrence book kept by the defendant containing entries made at the time of their occurrence?—Yes.

The Attorney General intimated that he intended putting in a somewhat similar one. At least, he would offer it.

Mr. Slade—You won't. You may offer it, but you won't get it in. I am defending a prisoner, and of the authenticity of this book there is not the least possible doubt.

His Lordship—It is not put in yet.

Mr. Slade—I put it in now, my Lord. Witness continuing said that, according to the book, on the morning of the 15th July, the defendant went at 7.30 a.m. to the Saiyigpoon Market, and from there to the Western and Central Markets. At 9 a.m. he proceeded to the Kowloon Cattle Depot. If the times in the books were correct it was not practical for him to have gone first to his house in Chater Street. On the 24th December last, at 11 a.m., defendant was on duty at the slaughter-house, and according to the book his last entry of work being done there was at 5 p.m. He was not allowed to leave the premises while on duty; if he did his work a man would be kept there all the time.

Re-examined by the Attorney General.—Defendant's house was five minutes' walk from the slaughter-house. Anonymous petitions were received making charges against the defendant.

Mr. Slade claimed that he had the right to cross-examine on the point. Anonymous petitions and letters had positively flowed into the Registrar General's department since the man had been charged.

The Attorney General—Not since. On the contrary—

Mr. Slade—Since he has been in the markets. In fact he has been charged with every sort of crime from murder downwards.

The Attorney General—My friend's statement regarding defendant being charged with every sort of crime from murder downward, reminds me of the doggerel:—

"A man who smokes, or reads the Times,
Or goes to Christmas pantomimes,
Is capable of any crimes."

Mr. Slade—With regard to the ambiguous allegation made against the prisoner by the Crown with reference to these complaints, I ask leave to cross-examine the witness upon them. His Lordship—I will ask any questions you desire to put.

Mr. Slade—With all deference, my Lord, I would rather ask them myself.

His Lordship—I don't think I can allow you to do that.

Mr. Slade then resumed his seat.

His Lordship—I will now ask the witness a question. As regards these complaints, are you aware or not whether they formed the subject of the present charge?

Witness—I understood they did not.

Mr. Slade—As I have stated, my Lord, they were matters having no bearing on the case at all.

Fung Yung, salesman in the Sun Fu poultry shop, Western Market, again described a visit he made on 14th July, 1902 to the defendant's house in Chater Street and spoke to the payment of $10 of the poultry guild's money to the defendant.
